

I am shocked that Sinclair Broadcasting is forcing their stations to broadcast a one sided political documentary just days before the election. This demonstrates the dangers of having huge conglomerates controlling our airwaves. How can our country continue to be a democracy if big money buys huge communications companies and then controls the information that the public receives? The only way that a democracy can work is if there is a dialogue with balanced presentations from all sides of an issue. To show a glossy presentation such as this and then "balance" it with a dry discussion would be supremely unfair. What is happening to our country?
